THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, SEPTEMBER 29, 1899

A Real Libel.

Under the head of "Libels," the Evening newspaper contains the following offensive paragraphs, with reference to Senator Scott:

Senator Scott:

First Speaker—"Glad to hear that one of our factories is to be purchased and put in operation. Good move; promoters deserve credit."

Second—"Promoters be d—d, that is all political chaff. Would not spend a dollar in such directions. Don't you know that such talk is all in their thour!"

What encouragement does a business man find to invest his money in a new industrial enterprise to give increased employment at good wages to working-men, and to extend the trade of Wheeling, in such an insulting insinuation as the above in a newspaper to which he rightfully looks for encouragement Is it in this way that the interests of Wheeling are to be encouraged?

been expected from a newspaper published in the backwoods, but not in a manufacturing center. To say nothing of the foul language of the second para graph, the intent of both together must ave been born of malice and published in iniquity.

Valandigham-Atkinson

Under the above heading the New York Sun publishes a communication from H. M. Smith, of Brooklyn. It gives some quotations from a letter of Presi-Lincoln, addressed to Erastus Corning, and others, in reply to resolu tions passed at a Democratic me-ting at Albany, in June, 1963, condemning the arrest of Vallandigham.
"Mr. Vallandigham," said Mr. Lin

"avows his hostility to the war on the part of the Union and his arrest was made because he was laboring with some effect, to prevent the raising of troops, to encouraging desertion from the army, and to leave the rebellion without adequate military force to sup-press it. He was warring upon the military, and this gave the military constitutional jurisdiction to lay hands upon him."

Mr. Lincoln continued: "Must I shoot a simple-minded soldier boy who deserts, while I must not touch a hair of a wilv agitator who induces him to de-This is none the less injurious when effected by getting a father, or brother or friend into a public meeting, and then working upon his feelings until he is persuaded to write the soldier boy that he is fighting in a bad causfor a wicked administration of a contemptible government, too weak to arrest and punish him if he shall desert, I think that, in such a case, to silence and save the boy is no only constitutional, but, withal, a great

Atkinson and his associates in the League are doing no more, no less than Valiandigham did, as described by the immortal President who gave his own life for that holy cause. If it is not treason, what is it, in Heaven's name? What law, what clause in the constitution justifies their conduct, in fighting the sacred emblem that represents human freedom and traducing the Chief Executive of the United States and commander-in-chief of the American armies and navies?

Who is there base enough to endorse such a policy who deserves to be called an American citizen? What does the Democratic party hope to gain by en dorsing such a contemptible business? Is there no warrant, as in the days of Lincoln, to punish the person who induces the American soldier to desert and risk his life at the hands of the government under the military laws?

Disloyalty to City Development, The Register is respectfully informed in reply to some impertinent questions that the Intelligencer never claimed its interview with Senator Scott was It was the Register that made that claim. It is a fact that Sen-ator Scott requested that he desired a reporter to see him and obtain the news of the proposed industrial movement. It is a fact that Senator Scott declared that he proposed that both the morning papers should have it; that the way to get the public interested was through the medium of the three newspapers in the city, and he hoped that all would work together in harmony to interest the public. Had he adopted the Register's spirit our news would have been exclusive. The Intelligencer received the plans suggested by the senator on the same terms that the Register re-

The Intelligencer's interview was by appointment, and at an hour convenient to the senator. It is not to the gurpose that the Register should presoribe the proper hour for the Intelligencer to keep an appointment with our progressive citizen and senator title the Register disputes, and who is doing all he can to promote the industrial interests of Wheeling.

What the public wants to know, what Senator Scott wants to know, what the Intelligencer wants to know, is, does the Register propose to join with the two other newspapers in the city to the furtherance of this new industry, or does it intend to continue to vent its malice to the extent that it is doing? Is it for helping this matter slong by editorially impressing upon the business men who read its columns the importance of a new industry, or does it propose to continue to monopolize its space in a valu attempt to prove that the Intelligencer obtained its interview fraudulently?

Are the proprietors of the Register permitting their local staff to embarrass a coming industry by venting their malice on the Intelligencer? Why is not the Register editorially encouraging the promotion of the new glass works save in one paragraph? Why is it left to the local reporters? Why doesn't the Register throw aside its malice and join with Senator Scott and the Intelligencer and the News and the business interests in a disinterested booming of the new enterprise? How does it concern the public as to which paper in terviewed our esteemed senator first?

The Colored Moses.

Booker Washington recently delivered a speech, which vindicates the good oninion which the world has for the leader of his race in the United States He points out that only individual effort can give the colored people the respect and consideration of the white Individual effort can place him on the pinnacle that will make him the admiration of the world. No less a man than Colonel Henry Watterson, an ex-Confederate, endorses this statement.

The lesson Washington strives to teach is a very old one, and has been impressed upon man since the begin ning of time, but "till now few or no friends of the colored man have been wise enough to recognize that the same conditions apply to both races. Booker Washington clearly discerns this fact, and puts his finger on the "recking sore of the black civilization"

when he says:

I confess that my heart is greatly and constantly troubled by the large number of negro boys and men who stand in idleness about the streets of our cities and towns. The negro is too poor to be idle. He is too far behind to let others get ahead of him in learning useful occupations. He is too weak to fall to secure that strength and respect which come to anyone through the ownership of property and the conduct of business. I do not find too much fault; the negro. In proportion to his opportunities, has made unparalleled progress, but I want the progress in the future to be far greater than in the past.

Washington notes the chief drawback when he observes the idle and improviwhen he says:

when he observes the idle and improvi-dent habits of the colored population in the large cities of the south. It is this fact which has made them, in cases, a lawless element of the citizenship, a class undervalued by manufacturers, who declare they are the most costly and undestrable labor employed. This, also, is a summary of a commen by Colonel Watterson, and we quote him, because it is all the more significant, Colonel Watterson having fought to perpetuate slavery Colonel Watterson quotes Mr. Rankin, manager of the Henderson cotton mills, in a recent commercial address in which he said the trouble was that the colored workmen had not been taught sanitary measures, and could only be employed for menial work, and are unreliable On the farm the southern colored men lack thrift and regard for the land owner's interest.

The "recognition by Booker Washing ton of the chief faults of his people in the south, and his steady refusal," says Mr. Watterson. "to listen to dema-gogues at attempts to elevate the race by politics, constitute a true title to greatness. If any Moses can lead his race out of the Egypt of ignorance, sloth, and vice, Booker Washington is that man."

What a blessing it would be to this country, and particularly the southern portion, if there were a thousand other Booker Washingtons.

Washington is a native of West Virginia. In West Virginia the colored man has liberty, educational advantages supported by the state, and is free the persecutions which drive him to desperation. The West Virginia climate and soil bred this Moses, leading his race from the Wilderness. May she produce more of them. West Virginia soil is rich in the production of all that promotes civilisation, Dewey's Greatness.

New York Post: It is, indeed, the evelation of Admiral Dewey's character after the battle which has most en-deared him to his countrymen. It is not only the fighting man we welcome it is the diplomatist, the statesman it is the diplomatist. The state-small with large outlook, the kindly gentle-man, the frank and fearless American. "I had their huzzas before," said Nelson, when leaving England just before Trafalgar; "now I have their hearts." So do we give our cheers to the man who fought so well, but our heartfelt thanks we reserve for the man who showed himself still greater, after victory, in the qualities which most adorn our poor humanity, whether in war of peace, "Long live your fine old English admiral-yours. I mean—the U.S. A. one at Samoa." wrote Robert Louis Stevenson in 1889, when the news of the cool heroism of our sailors in the face of death at Apla reached him. "I wept tears and loved myself and mankind when I read of him. And there was Gordon, too; and there are others, beyond question." This is the real tribute to Dewey—that he fought like a paladin when fighting was his duty, but that afterwards he was great in gentleness; conciliated Spaniards and drew to him self the devotion of Filipinos; was considered as he was vigilant, as kind with large outlook, the kindly gentle

West Virginia editors who are as small-brained as they are discourteous and inhospitable, afford themselves intense amusement by jeering at Ritchie county, and evidently think that to do this is profoundest argument and crushing reply te anything of which they do not approve. They profess to believe that any one who ever stopped off over night in the county, could as a matter of course, never have been anywhere else in the world. In this they are feeble imitators of the idiocy of a few newspapers in Pittaburgh and other cities, which never find anything in West Virginia that is worthy of anything but ridicule, thus demonstrating not that this state is behind the times and populated by gawks and ruffans, but merely their own ignorance and prejudice.

The Admiral Warned.

Richmond Dispatch: So far as newspaper interviews go, Admiral Dewey is paper interviews go, Admiral Dewey is upon record for confessing that he isn't qualified to fill the presidential office, and as saying positively that he will not become a candidate.

We doubt not that those really were his sentiments when they were spoken, but he may change his mind after landing and after seeing what a Dewey craze there is in the country. At any rate, the possibility of his doing so is being discussed in many places and manars and we should not be surprised.

craze there is in the country. At any rate, the possibility of his doing so is being discussed in many places and papers, and we should not be surprised if we were told that Mr. McKinley himself felt some concern about the matter. But for our part, we warn the admiral to steer clear of the politiclans. They can add nothing to his giory, and he now has an office that ought to satisfy the ambition of his declining years. Now he is a general favorite, whereas if he became President he would soon have a host of enemies—disappointed office-seekurs and others. No man ever yet was happier from becoming the occupant of the white house. Dewey is admiral for life; if he could be President for life possibly the case might be will be content to continue to be a Jolly old sea-dog for the rest of his days.

The Issues Mapped Out.

The Issues Mapped Out

Journal (Dem.): Louisville Courier Let no Democrat deceive himself about the issue of issues in 1900. It is already fixed. There will be but one sue uppermost in the public mind and heart, and that will be the war in the Philippine Islands and the policy of ex-

Philippine Islands and the policy of expansion.

Free silver as a vital issue is already, as dead as the issue of African slavery. No matter what is said of it, or is left unsaid, by the next national Democratic platform, it cannot be made sertiously to arrest the attention of the voters. If we ever attain free silver at the ratio of 15 to 1, or any other ratio, it will be through expansion, and through expansion, and through expansion and expansion at the ratio of 15 to 1, or any other ratio, it will be through expansion, and through expansion and the ratio of 15 to 1, or any other ratio, it will be through expansion, and through expansion alone; our Pacific and Asiatic interests furnishing a silver outlet for an otherwise barren ideality. The deadly danger to Democracy is the misleading cry of "Anti-Imperialism."

It is the figurent of the fancy of a few old women in Boston and of the ignorance of a few unreflecting and half-educated demacgues in the west and south.

If the Democratic party should adopt it the party would have first to surrous it the party would have first to surren-der to Aguinaldo, and then to give itself over to God, for even Grandma Hoar could not be relied on to vote the ticket.

Youth's Companion: The teacher of a school in Maine tells a story that reminds me of Mary and her little lamb, only it is of Joe and his little day. Joe was a boy about eight years old, and was devoted to a small, lank puppy. Out of school hours boy and dog were inseparable, and one apparently could not reconcile himself to the necessity of leaving the dog at home. For several mornings the teacher allowed the puppy to remain at Joe's feet under the desk. Then there came a day when the small dog could not be kept quiet, but frisked about, to the delight of the school and the dismay of the teacher.

"Joe," she said, firmly. "Tou must take that dog out."

Toe looked at her mournfully, but picked up the pupp, and with his head against his cheek started for the door. The boys' feelings were evidently but, but he said nothing until he reached the door, then giving his teacher a repreachful look, with a pltying giance door, then giving his teacher a preachful look, with a pitying gia toward the dog, he said, slowly: "A he's named for you."

The Living Dead.

The Living Dead.

What shall we do with our dead?
The dead who have not died—
Who meet as still in the very paths
Where they once walked by our side.
Not those that we love and mourn.
At rest on a distant shore.
But the jost yet living women and men
Whom we loved—and love no more.
There are shroud and dower and stone
To hide the dead from our sight.
But these are ghosts that will not be laid—
They come 'twix to and the light;
And the heaven loses its blue.
And the rose has worms at the core,
Because of the living women and men
Whom we loved—and love no more.
